It is available countywide and partner agencies such as Contra Costa County and cities of Antioch, Moraga, San Pablo, and Walnut Creek devote funds and staff time to conduct outreach to their residents. This is a grassroots community engagement project, in which households take actions to reduce their carbon footprint and form Teams to motivate others. The project is funded through a grant from the Bay Area Air Quality Management District."

There are 13 large actions with point values ranging from 620 (i.e. upgrading oven/stove) to 14530 (buying an electric vehicle). The program also gives points to individuals conserving with actions such as skipping the morning commute and eating less meat. The points displayed is the total points earned in each city.

Local governments are leading the charge in encouraging members in their communities to take the cleaner contra costa county challenge. This is often done thru websites, emails, and various town newsletters and outreach efforts to businesses and residents! Funding from BAAQMD
